Mark Twain at the Embodiment of American Romance

Mark Twain has been celebrated as humorist, writer, idealist, and even as a reformer; but to Archibald Henderson, of the University of North Carolina, he appeals primarily as an embodiment of national romance.

"American literature, indeed I might say American life," Professor Henderson writes in a new book 'can exhibit no example of supreme success from the humblest beginning to signal as the example of Mark Twain.'

Lincoln became President of the United States, and so did Grant and Johnson.

But assassination began for Lincoln an apotheosis which, in Professor Henderson's judgement, has gone to deplorable lengths of hero-worship and adulation.

Grant was "one of the great failures in American public life," and Johnson, "brilliant but unstable, narrowly escaped impeachment."

Mark Twain enjoys the unique distinction of exhibiting a progressive development, a deepening broadening of forces, a ripening of intellectual and spiritual powers from the beginning to the end of his career.

"From the standpoint of the man of letters, the evolution of Mark Twain from a journeyman printer to a great author, from a merry-andrew to a world-humorist, from a river-pilot to a trustworthy navigator on the vast and uncharted seas of human experience, may be taken as symbolic of the romance of American life."

THE L. & N. MAY BE SOLD

To the Pennsylvania Railroad Co--Board
Meets to Day

The Louisville Courier-Journal printed yesterday a dispatch from Baltimore predicting the purchase of the L. & N. road by the Pennsylvania.

The persistent rumors that the Pennsylvania would build into Evansville have been doubted because of lack of a Southern outlet. In case of the Pennsylvania's purchase of the L. & N., the line to Evansville would likely be built among other reasons to give the north and south branches of the new system another point of contact.

The dispatch from Baltimore follows:

Local financial circles were keenly interested today in the persistent statements which were freely circulated to the effect that the Pennsylvania railroad is about to close a deal to purchase the Atlantic Coast Line company, which controls the Atlantic Coast Line railroad, owner of the majority of the stock of the L. & N., one of the most important pieces of Southern railroad property in existence. Should the deal be finally consummated it will not only be one of the biggest purchases in recent railroad history in the country but will be the first move on the part of a Northern trunk line railroad to establish a connection of its own into the vast rich territory of the south.

In damp, chilly weather there is always a large demand for BALLARD'S SNOW LINIMENT because many people who know by experience its great relieving power in rheumatic aches and pains, prepare to apply it at the first twinge. Annual Output of Lead Pencils

The annual output of lead pencils in this country is more than $29,000,000. The cedar wood used in making them weighs about 100,000 tons and nearly three-fourths of a cent's worth of wood is required for each pencil. No other wood is so good for the purpose and the timber is becoming scarce. Old cedar planks and fence rails now find ready market.

HARRISON ROAD MUST PAY.

The State of Kentucky $377,000 Back Taxes.

The State of Kentucky won a victory over the Southern Pacific Company, when the United States Supreme Court decided that the Commonwealth had the right to tax the company on the latter's steamers plying between New York and New Orleans, New York and Galveston and Havana. The steamer were valued at $12,000,000.

The immediate result of the decision is to establish a claim of the State against the railroad company for $377,000 for back taxes, while bringing to city and State together an annual income from this source of $60,000. Of this $58,000 each year will go to the State and $2,000 to the county. The claim of $377,880 when collected will be split three ways, the State getting $212,000 and the county $140,00. The company owns twenty-two steamships, all of which have been assessed.

No More Dyspepsia.

Speed Versus Courtesy

While we had nothing serious happen on the trip, and at no time were in need of help, says Helen Lukens Gaunt describing in Sunset magazine for November, a motor run from Los Angeles to San Francisco we often stopped to water and oil the Meadow Lark and adjust the machinery, just as a wise precaution.

Usually, during our stops from one to six autos would pass, covering us with dust and dirt, never so much as slowing up a trifle to inquire if we were in trouble. In fact during the entire trip of about one thousand miles, only two auto parties offered us assistance.

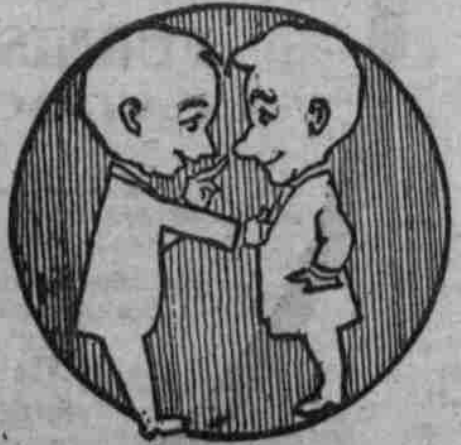

In our hearts we blessed them for their courtesy.

Either there is no such a thing as road etiquette or the party in trouble is expected to 'holter for help' if he needs it. Sometimes a patch, a little oil, gasoline, cement, or perhaps an experienced suggestion as to what the matter is, will save the day for home puzzled autoist and start him on his way rejoicing. Automobiles are creatures of temperament, emotions and peculiarities, and it requires tact and understanding to keep them in good humor.

"I am pleased to recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as the best thing I know of and safest remedy for coughs, colds and bronchial trouble," writes Mrs. L. B. Arnold, of Denver, Colo. "We have used it repeatedly and it has never failed to give relief." For sale by all Dealers.

The old gun has been thoroughly cleaned until the outside looks like parlor furniture, and the inside of the barrels shines like a new silver dime; the dog, which has been coaxed more carefully than ever in the past few months, is being given the best meat and "scraps" which the market affords; the old hunting coat and corduroy trousers have been gotten out from closet or trunk where they were put on New Year's day; a full supply of shot has been bought, and every local hunter took the field Wednesday morning, the bird law is out and the fields are a live with Nimrods. Reports to the effect that quails are very numerous have spurred them on as never before.

SONG OF NATURE

By--J. E. FAWCETT

I know not what it is but when I pass
Some running bit of water by the way,
A river brimming silver in the grass
Rippling o'er the rocks wet with spray.

I cannot keep my glad heart from a cry
It is so joyful at the gladsome sight
So pleasant is the water running by,
So full the waving grass is of delight.

And if a Kentucky Cardinal passing near
Should light beside me in the bending tree,
And above the rippling water I should hear
The drowsy droning of the busy bee.

I know that I would lift my heart in song,
And the echo's of the woodland, start.
I feel so glad so happy and so strong
So near to Mother Nature's kindly heart.
